

MASS MOVEMENT ADDRESSES WOMENS INSTITUTE

A meeting of the Womens Institute was held on Saturday afternoon in Westminster Church.

The meeting opened with the singing of "O Canada" in which all heartily joined. The President, Mrs. Roy introduced the speaker Miss Todd, who, after congratulating the Chauvin Branch of the Institute on what it had accomplished, and the enthusiasm of its officers and members also the splendid way in which it was organized, gave a very interesting and instructive address for her subject "Literary Programs and How to Conduct Them."

Miss Todd mentioned several different forms a Literary Program might take and urged the importance of encouragement of home talent in every way possible in carrying out its programs for concerts and entertainments to bring out the talent in the community and also as a means of educating and encouraging all to take their place in the world.

Miss Todd also suggested that the Programs should occasionally take the form of study of the questions of Canada and of the world, and that they should study and especially women, now that they have the vote given them; and advising the branch to subscribe to some magazines which dealt more particularly with questions of the day, thus affording the members the opportunity of fitting themselves to vote in a manner which should best help in the governing of Canada.

House cleaning, the care of children and the serving of meals, was, Miss Todd said, and always will be woman's sphere. Why, then, should they not do their part in the house cleaning of Canada? Women, Miss Todd urged should study to make themselves competent to fill their place in public as well as in the home.

At the close of the address the President thanked Miss Todd on behalf of the members and visitors present, and a bouquet of carnations and crysanthemums was presented to Miss Todd by Miss Leontine.

Before departing tea was served by members of the Institute, to which everyone was invited.

The platform was daintily draped with blue and gold, the colors of the Institute and both cut flowers and plants were contributed to the decoration. There were 48 ladies present.

DETERMINING FACTORS IN FIXING PRICE OF WHEAT

Hon. Arthur Meighen, minister of the Interior, addressing a gathering at Fort St. John, Thursday, August 21st, said in answer to a question put to him on the subject of the fixed price of wheat "The government has stated would have established itself to fix the matter alone, but is soon saw that it had to do something or the wheat would not move out of the country. The banks refused to finance the price unless the government got behind it, and the railways made it clear that unless the government saw to it, the wheat was bought they would not move it. Three methods of handling were then discussed by the government.

The first was that the government buy at a fixed price and take the chance of gain or loss, the second that a minimum price be fixed by law and allow trading above that price only. This was very seriously considered. The third alternative was that the government has taken. By the first method there might have been gain or loss to the government. The government had a right to look for neither. If the second alternative had been adopted the banks would have paid only up to the fixed price. Under the plan adopted by the government will pay $215 per bushel for the wheat and in the best advantage, pool the proceeds and the farmer will receive his proportional share of the profits.

Mr. Meighen wished it to be understood that the government had not set the price on wheat, but had simply fixed the price which would be advanced by the government. One of the reasons why this was done was that the United States price would be a guide to the Canadian price and as the United States price was handled by the government the Canadian price might keep up with its own crop and then let the Canadian price fall. Such a thing might be done.

Producer Gets Profit
Under the present arrangement the producer gets the produce and not the speculator, and a farmer is able to get on with his work instead of rushing about to sell his wheat, said the minister.

Answering a question, Mr. Meighen said that he would not see that the price of wheat was falling.

If you are figuring on a Gramophone for your home this fall, why not Victrola and have the best value for your money. The Gramophone, Victor Records—admitted everywhere as the leaders—90 cents each, double faced.

The Chauvin Pharmacy

British government is in a position to say what it shall pay for its wheat. It is thought the price of $130 mentioned in recent news despatches is the price to British millers, the British government absorbing any loss in the transaction. It is not clear if the laboring classes. Asked about the price of flour, Mr. Meighen said that the board has power to determine what the Canadian miller shall pay and decide what profits he shall make.

STORY OF THE FIRST FARMERS CANDIDATE

By H. Higginbotham in the Grain Growers Guide

Henry E. Spencer, who was nominated as a candidate for the Federal Parliament at the recent U. F. A. political convention, held at Wainwright, has the distinction of being the first candidate to be nominated in the new political movement by the organized farmers of Western Canada. Mr. H. E. Spencer, in many respects, personifies the ideals behind the farmers political movement. He is a real farmer candidate, and moreover he is a young man with no previous political party affiliations. He is the farmer of the Battle river constituency were hoping for a candidate who would be more political of the U. F. A. movement, it could not have found a better, Mr. Spencer has been connected with the U. F. A. near Edmonton, where he resides, since he settled there in 1913. Two years later he helped form the McCaffery local, with which Mr. Spencer has been affiliated ever since. In 1914 he was president. His initiative and good-natured aggressiveness commended him to the farmers of the district as U. F. A. director for the Battle River constituency.

Mr. Spencer has the record for doing the things. His election as director was a new thing, since he was previously avoided at home, and this was the first case of an officer of the U. F. A. being elected to office on the first occasion when not present at the convention. It is significant also of Mr. Spencer's belief in equal rights.

particularly as regards men and women, that Mrs. Spencer addressed the convention on his behalf when he was elected. He has been re-elected at Alcester, Warwickshire, England, in 1882, so that he is still quite a young man. He was given a good education and on leaving school went into a bank, where he served for eight years and afterwards he was in the printing business in Paris, France for one year. He came to Alberta in 1908 and in 1909 homesteaded at Edgerton, but is now farming in partnership with his brother Herbert.

A sketch of Henry E. Spencer would be incomplete without reference to his brother, that he would be difficult to say how much of Henry's success is due to the co-operation of his brother Herbert. The two brothers are like the Siamese twins. They are constantly together in work and counsel. While Henry appears to have the larger share of initiative and aggressiveness, it seems to rely on his brother's judgment. Herbert has an unusual share of modesty and is apparently anxious that his brother should be the one to make a speech they say Herbert can put it all over his brother. He is not allowed to speak. Since Henry Spencer, director of the Battle River constituency, his work has met with signal success. He has now been elected director of being the youngest U. F. A. director and having charge of the con-

Big Profit In Raising Good Beef

The big possibilities of stock raising is a subject that finds ready entrance to the columns of the North American press. Dream after dream and theory after theory is expounded at the expense of tons of ink and paper.

To the much that has been already said on this important topic we are about to add our contribution. In doing this, however, we are going to confine our selves to facts, and quite a specific instance.

In March 1817 on the 35. B. Lang farm was born a bull calf. His mother was a grade cow; whilst the sire was a half-blooded registered Short-horn.

The life history of this animal is of value to our readers only as it is typical of the method raising stock on the Lang farm.

This calf, as is often the case in this district was born in zero weather. All through the summer the calf laid happy days feeding on the full supply of his mother's milk. He thrived well, having also the advantage of the blood of his sire. Winter came on in connection with the other calves on the Lang farm, he enjoyed the pampered life of a bovine aristocrat that is to say he enjoyed a good and warm stable and the best feed on any farm—oat sheaves, oats, both crushed and whole, and at all times an ample supply of water.

Thus the winter passed and with the spring a reward was made to the pasture where more did our young bovine friend enjoy the comfort and pleasure of his for during the next two of a windy biting cold was only that of the shelter from the stormy blast. Always bluff, abet his stomach winks well loaded both with oats and corn, —but the produce of the food—expensive article or improper, until so peacefully passed his of his one morning with a Chauvin herd, he took the road to the farm. Then taking advantage of the fast service on the G. T. P., he neared his bovine mistress, and basely sold for (more than) pieces of gold for (more than) pieces of gold.

Thus the value of raising good stock simply exemplified. What is possible for one raiser is possible for others. Further, it is a matter we for years since we regarded Mr Lang as a town man rather than farmer.

Is Wheat A Gamble?
BY ROBERT JUKES

We are tempted to this question, because our experience in conversing on crops and prospects with grain growers is, that they invariably wind up their observations by saying, "What growing is somewhat of a gamble."

We have always inclined to view the business, as a speculative investment, or bet, made by the individual with himself on the outcome of a venture. This however cannot really be main tained, because the difference between a bet and gambling is defined as, "Gambling differs from betting in that it depends upon the result of a trial of skill or a turn of chance."

On this assumption the growing of wheat may be regarded as a gamble, for it must be assuredly impossible for success on an effort of the grower in the decision of a "trial of skill" or "a turn of chance."

In this argument it will be evident at once, that to be a good "gambler," and achieve a win, the grower must be absolutely sure of his outfit in every detail, for the simple reason that the equipment nature, against whom he stakes his skill, his intelligence, and his labor must be flawless.

Reduced to the last analysis, every man is a gambler, by force of circumstance—Every human being is engaged, more or less in a tremendous game against one opponent, who commands invisible forces. Nature makes no mistakes—She takes no chances. Whereas her opponent, on both these points is miserably shaky.

The wheat grower does not stand alone, all growers of foodstuffs are, if we reason as above, "gamblers;" they pit their knowledge against the unseen forces of nature, and after achieving a partial win by producing results, they find themselves faced with the visible force of man.

This new feature advocates to itself the right to diminish the probability returns from the labor and skill of the grower, to the executive benefit of its own pocket.

At this point of the game the grower is joined by the consumer, and the two together find themselves engaged in a desperate struggle with an individual who, too is known as the "profiteer". In his fresh development of the game, the weakest unit is represented by the consumer. In the meantime in earnest speculation of this come-for, ready or whatever one may call it, to term it, and who we may say is a gambler, takes a hand, realizing no bit that his interests are linked with the grower, and the consumer—that if the rapacity of the Profiteer be not checked, his friends will perish.

The State apex to be grasping this solid fact. It time. The wheat graver may or may not be a gambler but he puts up good fight for a "win out." Here's "50" to the Gambler.

Sale Of Cattle

To Manitoba Is

Now Called Off

WINNIPEG, MAN.—As a result of information received by Hon. Valentine Winkler, provincial minister of agriculture, the purchase of cattle by the government from the farmers of Alberta will be considerably delayed. A wire received yesterday by one of the provincial agents at Calgary stated that the present time the cattle market was normal and prices were being well maintained. The message continued by saying that the farmers of Alberta were counting considerably on the government hay scheme and that many of them were holding on to their stock in the hope that they would be able to carry them through the winter as a result of the government's assistance. It is conservatively estimated however, that 75 per cent of the stock south of the border will have to be sold. It is not expected, however, that the farmers will commence to sell for at least a month.

A DELIGHTFUL
VACATION TRIP

In describing the Northern Canadian Rockies, a prominent writer says:—"Out on the Western slope of this Continent, beyond the plains of western Canada rise the peaks of the Northern Rockies. It is the top of the earth, this wonderland of mountains, and embraces the Canadian National Parks Jasper and Mount Robson, with their hundreds of peaks and thousands of lakes, a place of infinite glory of sky, and cloud and summit."

A trip to the North Pacific coast via the Grand Trunk Pacific takes you through the heart of this unsurpassed scenic country, which has only been accessible to the travelling public since the construction of this railway. Jasper Park Camp, close to Jasper Park station, surrounded with exquisite scenery is an ideal place to spend your vacation. Rates for board are reasonable, and service excellent. Guides, pack horses and conveyances of all kinds are also available. Good fishing may also be had. Get literature from your Grand Trunk Pacific

AN IRISHMAN'S LUCK
OUR SERIAL STORY

The climax to Daisy's disgust, with things in general and Boers and bills in particular, was reached one Thursday evening, while Mrs. Enderby was in the month. Though it was nearly nine o'clock, Bert and his father were still up at the table bagging the load of oats which the farmer was to take to town in the morning, and Mrs. Enderby and Evelyn were sitting by the stove sewing, while Mary Ann and Daisy were laying the table for the early breakfast the next morning which Bert's visits to town involved.

"I shall be truly thankful when all this going to town and getting up in the dark is over," said Daisy, as she placed some cold pork and marmalade and butter on the table and covered them with an open newspaper.

"This suggests the flight of the Israelites," said Mrs. Enderby, "half asleep and—cranky, and Bert is coming to his breakfast from his start in his hair, his boots and his fur cap on his head, and in a great rush to get away—I don't suppose they had any cold pork, or possibly marmalade—but at any rate they got out of the land, of bondage—and we have all the discomforts of it and have to stay in it. Well, I suppose we may as well go to bed now, Marion, or Bert will be tapping at my door—six o'clock,"—before I get to sleep—are you coming, Evelyn?"

"Oh, I will wait," said Mrs. Bert comes in. I may not see him in the morning but I want to ask him to leave a little while for me at the Dawson's as he goes by—I forgot you were in the kitchen when I was telling your mother—I am going to stay with Miss Dawson for a few days and go to school from there."

"Stay with Miss Dawson—Mary Ann Dawson—for a few days—why you in the name of all that's crazy are you going to old Dawson's for?"

"Daisy, dear, do be more courteous in your way of speaking," interrupted Mrs. Enderby, "I'm sure it is very kind of you to go, and quite proper for her, too, as Mrs. Dawson is so ill, and when old Mrs. Dawson is so ill, and poor Mary Ann has no one to help her in nursing her mother?"

"I promised Miss Dawson when I was at the office yesterday," said Evelyn quietly, "she looked so wretched and hardly any rest at all nights, and very little I expect in the daytime, for Mr. Dawson does not seem to even look after the cows and things, and people are in and out a good deal for their mail. So I said I would go up after school tomorrow and stay till—"

"Oh, I know it is not any good saying anything," broke in Daisy, "rather impatiently, 'only it's not going to be very gay here while you are away and you may be the till spring if you are going to wait till the old lady hands in her—no, mother, I won't say it—till she takes her departure for the Elysian Fields—because she hardly fits in with her horror of muddy boots but Doctor Casey said the other day he was tired of people asking him if she was dead yet, as if it was his fault that she wasn't."

"I'm sure," interrupted Mrs. Enderby mildly, and quite innocent of any double entendre, "that no one blames the doctor for her lingering so long—he says it is just the tenacity of the Irish peasant constitution—the same thing that makes them so slow in paying their rents in the Old Country—thought I don't quite see what the doctor meant by that—only I hope that they will keep the house warm, for Bert said after supper that there were rings round the moon, and that he expected that we should have a change to colder weather, and you might take Daisy's thick dressing gown in case."

"Oh, I'm sure I shall be quite comfortable," said Evelyn cheerfully, "and if Mr. Bert is up for the mail I'll send you word how I am getting along, and in any case I'll be down to church a week on Sunday."

"Well, good-night, mother; good-night, Evelyn, I suppose what must be must be, and you and mother are both as irresponsible for your mother's daughter instinct for pastoral visitation as old Mrs. Dawson for her slow-wittedness—you and I, Marion, are just ordinary farmer's daughters and had best go to bed. By the way, Evelyn, I'll remind Bert if he shows any sign of forgetting the mail day, which which Fatherly dart Daisy followed her sister upstairs to their own room."

"Now, what do you make of that."

Merry?" asked Daisy as she closed the door and set down the little lamp on the dressing table.

"What do I make of what?" replied Marion rather sharply, "I do wish you would not make that kind of remark to Evelyn—I'm sure she does not like it."

"Oh, nonsense, she must know very well that Bert is dead gone."

"Why need you use such vulgar terms, besides I don't believe such a thing enters her head."

"Well, suppose it doesn't, there's no harm in putting it there—what's this idea of hers in going to Dawson's?"

"What idea should there be except to help Mary Ann and be kind to the old lady—what crazy notion have you got into your head now, child?"

"Oh, of course, I'm crazy—that's what people are always told if they keep their eyes open while other folks have their shut—I suppose you haven't noticed that Evelyn is in a state of restless excitement every mail-day till Bert comes in with it—and of course, you never noticed last week when Bert opened the paper and exclaimed 'Why the Canadian boys may go into action any day'—you didn't see how white she went?"

"Of course we were all excited—you know it quite upset mother, and she could talk of nothing but the Dawson's all evening. I did think there might be something between Evelyn and Tom Dennis last Fall, but that must have ended when he left, and she had never breathed a word about him all winter."

"She's not the breathing kind," remarked Daisy, "but any news that she comes will be at the post office before it comes here—I don't say she wouldn't have gone in for a day, for she's awfully good-natured and self-sacrificing and that kind of thing—but all the same, I fancy she won't be sorry to get the first place at the papers, and this nursing business will help to put in the time till the news does come."

"Indeed, it would be dreadful if anything did happen to the poor boys, when we've known them so long, but I think you have been letting your imagination run away with you, and it's not quite nice to watch Evelyn in that way."

"Very well, snub me if you like, Marion, I'm used to it—I hope Dugald won't find it rather trying when his turn comes and Daisy retired into silence and her own thoughts."

The Guiding Torch

Her eyes upon her book, and is wondering
A girl sits dreaming at her desk at school
At all it tells, and does not tell. What rule
Is there for beauty, or delight, or spring?
She gravely acquiesces and rebels
And seizes every fact her thick book tells.

She will set out soon, far from desk and book,
With heart impatient and with eager look,
Down that old road, that we have trod, a stranger
To all it holds of weariness and danger,
With only what these books have told.

No wisdom of the old
Will help her. We are dumb,
Selfish, we watch her come,
With only chance to guide,
And helpless to decide,
She must yet take, out of life's gifts that wait,
With groping hands, her fate.

Oh mother, whisper to her! Father speak!
Teacher can you not yield
Out of your strength, a shield
To go before her? She is young and weak;
And, books tell little, and her blood runs free.
Then give her knowledge for a torch when she Goes forth alone into the mystery—
The darkness that is life,—that so she may,
Holding that torch, unerring find the way

CHAUVIN WOMEN'S INSTITUTE MEETING

Once every year the Department send to each branch of the Alberta Womens Institute, a speaker. These speakers are persons of capacity and are well trained, being able to deal with their subjects in a masterly manner. The subjects likewise are those of current community interest.

Chauvin, this year, will be favored by Miss Tjdd, of Edmonton, who is due to arrive on Saturday, August 23rd.

The members of the Chauvin Women's Institute have joined the Westminster Church for the occasion, and are arranging a suitable program. They will also serve tea. As Miss Todd will only be in town between the time of the two trains it is requested that members and visitors will come in good time.

The directors of the Chauvin Women's Institute wish it to be distinctly understood that this meeting is open to all; and accordingly extend a very hearty invitation to the public to be present.

LIVESTOCK INSURANCE

All Classes of Livestock have so increased in value in recent years that Livestock Insurance is becoming a recognized feature in most mixed farming districts today. From a purely business point of view, the investment of money in a good animal should be protected quite as strictly as the investment of funds in a building or in a stock of merchandise.

Until a few years ago it was possible to insure only registered stock—horses or cattle, but now the companies which handle this class of business insure grade stock as well. The livestock application forms are simple, and the questions must be fully answered in order that the company may know, as far as possible, the class of animal it is insuring. The name of the animal, number in stud book, form of Stallion Enrolment Act.

Take your chance in W. S. S.

under which it is recorded, breed, identification color and marks, or brand, if any; age, last purchase price and present market value, how long the animal has been in the possession of present owner and from whom it was purchased by him.

In addition to this form the companies require a certificate from a qualified veterinary surgeon, and a special form for this purpose is supplied by the company and attached to the proposal form. This is to assure the company that the animal is sound and healthy at the time the proposal is submitted. This examination usually costs $5.00, which is paid to the vet, in addition to the premium.

If there is no veterinary surgeon in the district, then a small form known as a fifteen-day waiver must be signed or initialed by the proposer. This provides that the insurance company incurs no liability for fifteen days after the insurance is in force, if the animal contracts any disease during that time, or if it dies during the fifteen days in consequence of an accident, which occurred previous to the date of the insurance. This waiver is not acceptable for ordinary grade stock.

How The Rates Run

The rates average about seven and one-half per cent, and protection against fire and lightning must be secured as well for about 8 per cent in all. Ordinary farm horses may be insured for five and one-half per cent without, and six per cent with fire protection, while heavy draught horses and contract rate is at least ten and a half or eleven per cent. No animals are insured beyond the age of ten years.

There are also special transit rates provided to cover animals in transit by all. These rates are lower in summer than in winter. The summer rate on horses for five days cover while in transit is one-half of one per cent, while the winter rate is three-fourths of one per cent. For a trip requiring ten days, insurance the summer rate is one per cent and the winter rate is one and a half per cent. The rate for cattle in transit is about double that of horses.

DIRECTORY OF SHEEP AND GOAT BREEDERS

The sheep and goat industry in Canada continues to grow, not only on account of the money to be made from mutton and wool, but the fact that goats are immune from tuberculosis has been the great factor in the encouragement of much goat raising in a number of the provinces of Canada. Plummet No. 17, a Directory of Breeders of Pure Bred Sheep and Goats in the Dominion of Canada, issued by the Sheep and Goat Division of the Live Stock Branch and procurable, free upon application, from the Publications Branch, Ottawa gives the names and addresses of breeders of recognized breeds of sheep and goats in all parts of Canada. Ontario leads in the number of breeders of pure bred sheep while goat breeders are most numerous in British Columbia, where the milch goat industry is assuming fairly large proportions. It's one thing to have an idea, and another to carry it out.

Ancient Lights

On Agriculture

"The diseases and all accidents of Corn are worthy to be enquired, and would be more worthy to be enquired, if it were in man's power to help them: whereas many of them are not to be remedied, as the 'Mile' is the greatest, (which out of question) cometh by 'coseness of air; and therefore in Hills or large Champain-Grounds, it seldom cometh. This cannot be remedied, otherwise than that in Cornreys of small enclosure the Grounds be turned into larger Fields. Which I have known to be good in some Farms. Another disease is the putting forth of Wild Oats, whereinto Corn oftentimes (especially Barley) doth degenerate. It happeneth chiefly from the Weakness of the Grain that is sown: for if it either be too old or mouldy, it will bring forth Wild Oats. Another disease is Weeds; and they are such, as either Chalk or Overshadow the Corn, and bear it down, or starve the Corn, and deceive it of nourishment—Bacon, Natural History, 1625.

First Farmer's

Candidate

"stitution having the largest U.F.A. membership. The healthy state of the U.F.A. movement in the Battle River constituency is a fine tribute to his work. In the first four months of 1919 he formed over thirty locals in Battle River. In there any constituency which should be able to elect a Farmer's candidate it is Battle River. At the recent political convention with 400 delegates and approximately 800 people present, one got the impression that the farmers of Battle River would do anything for Henry Spencer. They successively elected him chairman of the convention, president of the district political association, and then gave him the nomination as their candidate for the Federal House. Ten names were put up for the nomination and when the opposing nominees were called upon for speeches, Mr Spencer said less than any of them. He simply told them that if he was nominated he would do his best.

He was not a great success as the chairman of the convention, several times having to be put right on parliamentary procedure from the floor of the house, but each time he accepted the correction with courtesy and good grace, admitted his error and went on. That is a good indication of his character. He is always sincere and trying to do something to better the condition of his class. He makes mistakes but he cheerfully accepts correction and goes on trying to do better. If he is elected to Parliament the house will hear from him. He is not afraid to speak his mind, is an uncompromising opponent of special privilege, and when he is convinced that he is right he pursues his course with bull-dog tenacity.

After receiving the nomination as candidate for the constituency, Mr Spencer resigned the presidency of the district political organization, his place Hill, who was Mr. Spencer's only serious opponent for the nomination. Mr Spencer's own age, full of character and determination add a fluent speaker. They will make a good team.

Mr. Spencer has issued a brief message to the U.F.A. locals of Battle River which is characteristic of him, and from which we quote:—

"In starting out in this new phase of our work it is well to remember that privilege does hard and that the old-time parties, backed by special interests, will do their utmost to undermine the progressive work we are doing. Do not, therefore, leave us alone unreturned in organizing new locals or in increasing your own membership. It takes this opportunity of recording my sincere appreciation for the support given me as candidate for the Battle River constituency. I can only the trust imposed on me, with fairness hope that I shall be able to carry out and equity.

"Battle River has started well; the course is open, let us make the place; if we do not win the fault will be our own."

Teach the Children to Save

Habits are acquired early in life. Children, who are taught the value of money and the habit of saving, grow up into good business men and capable women.

The easiest way to teach children to save, is to start a Savings Account for each child ($1.00 each is sufficient). After a child has saved another dollar to make an additional deposit, he or she will have a better appreciation of just what a dollar stands for, and how much work and self-denial it represents.
